

Sandvik Coromant wins prize for "Most Innovated Corporate Facility"

14 March 2015 by Sandvik Coromant

At the Integrated Systems Europe conference in Amsterdam this week Sandvik Coromant won the first prize in the category "Most Innovated Corporate Facility". This award is shared with our partner Visuell Design for the IT and Audio-visual solutions in our new Sandvik Coromant Center in Sandviken.

The Jurys motivation:

"The Judges were particularly impressed with customer feedback for integrator Visuell Design's work at the Sandvik Coromant Center in Sweden, which is a newly built center about the future of manufacturing. The benefits from using presentation and collaboration technologies to engage Sandvik Coromant's staff and customers were plain to see in this project that makes extensive use of Crestron DigitalMedia infrastructure. The integrator showed great skill in listening to the needs of its client and delivering appropriate and well-thought solutions."

Björn Roodzant, Vice President marketing and communications comments on this award:

"I feel great pride that we have won this award with our partner Visuell Design for our innovative AV and IT solutions in our Sandvik Coromant Center i Sandviken. This award is recognition for our work and commitment to putting our customers and visitors first. This work and what we received the award for is just one part of our global commitment in leading and developing our industry and digitally always being available for our customers when they need us".
